Utah Beach Monument

The Utah Beach Monument erected by the American Battle Monuments Commission with the approval of the French Government, commemorates the achievements of the American Forces of the VII Corps who fought in the liberation of the of the Cotentin Peninsula from 6 June to 1 July 1944. It consists of a red Bavano granite obelisk surrounded by a small developed park overlooking the historic sand dunes of Utah Beach.

Pointe du Hoc Ranger Memorial

In between Utah beach and Omaha beach is Pointe du Hoc where today is located the Pointe du Hoc Ranger Memorial. Here is where James E. Rudder's 2nd Ranger Battalion scaled the 100 foot cliffs on D Day morning, June 4 1944, to seize this fortified enemy position which controlled the landing approaches to Omaha and Utah beaches. The Memorial consists of a simple granite pylon atop a concrete bunker with inscriptions in French and English on tablets at its base. This site, preserved by the French, was transferred to the United States Government by formal agreement in 1979. The battle scarred area remains much as the Rangers left it on 8 June 1944.
